THE FACES of
A GROWING WINE INDUSTRY

Carboy's story is an evolving one that began in 2016 with founders Craig Jones, Kevin Webber, and Head Winemaker Tyzok Wharton. What started as an effort to bring a fun, innovative wine experience to the Front Range, in five short years, has become a crusade to put Colorado wine in a national spotlight as one of the next frontiers in American winemaking. Today, Carboy Winery joins a new dawn and renewal of Colorado's Grand Valley as a wine region on the rise. Together, with a host of other talented winemakers in Colorado, they're slowly turning a state known for its beer into one that creates exciting wines, lifting the industry into prominence. Hospitality, sustainability, and storytelling are all on display when visiting Carboy Winery which boasts four locations (Littleton, Denver, Breckenridge, and Palisade) and two estate vineyards making them one of the largest producers in the state. Through ambitious winemaking and innovation with new varietal wines, sparkling wines, and wine seltzers, Carboy embodies the adventure of Colorado wine.
